Equity Research Note | TTMI | 22 OCTOBER 2026

AI PCB Pure Play

TTM Technologies screens as a Buy with a $96.88 blended target, about 31 percent above the current price. We rebuilt the model after Q3 FY2026, when sales reached a record $1.20B, up 60 percent year over year, and adjusted EBITDA margin passed 20 percent for the first time. The forecast now runs on management's own guidance path: fiscal 2026 anchored to the raised full-year guide and fiscal 2027 set by scenario directly from the preliminary guide of $6.5B to $6.75B. This update also carries two corrections from our forensic audit of the model, detailed in the investment view: working capital is now charged at the filed historical rate, and terminal-year capex is set above depreciation.

The latest print

Inflection in Profitability. Record $1.20B quarterly revenue (+60%), record non-GAAP EPS of $1.46, EBITDA margins expanding to 20.1%. FY25 net margin of 6.1% doubled from 2.3%.

Mispriced Growth. At $73.89, NTM P/E is 11.9x with PEG of 0.36 for a company growing 60%. We now anchor the DCF to guided FY2026 revenue of $4,480M (the raised full-year guide midpoint in the Q3 2026 release, including the closed Epiq and Swiss Technology Group acquisitions), with fiscal 2027 set by scenario from the preliminary guide of $6.5B to $6.75B, and our $102.55 base sits above spot. The earnings multiple and the guide-anchored DCF agree that the market underappreciates the trajectory.

The valuation uses a multi-year unlevered free cash flow DCF. The discount rate is the live CAPM rate: the 10-year Treasury yield plus beta times the market-implied equity risk premium. Terminal value is a Gordon perpetuity on terminal-year free cash flow.

Mechanics are explicit. The bridge runs revenue to EBIT to cash taxes, then adds back D&A and subtracts capex and working-capital investment to reach unlevered free cash flow. Targets are divided by diluted shares outstanding.

The bear case

Cyclicality

PCB demand tracks electronics cycles; an AI capex pause would hit the data center segment hard.

M&A Execution

$1.1B Epiq acquisition adds integration and leverage risk.

Competition

Asian competitors compete on price; technology leadership (N+M) must be sustained.

The strengths

Operating Quality

Largest North American PCB manufacturer with A&D qualifications that take years to earn. Margins are thin for the industry (6% net) but improving. Cyclical end markets.

Recent Trend

Record quarterly revenue and EPS, +60% growth, book-to-bill 2.13, EBITDA margin at 20.1%. Data center +115% YoY. Firing on all cylinders.

Forward Growth

N+M technology ($600M H2 revenue), 15-20% organic growth guided for 2027-28, Epiq acquisition adds new vectors. Multi-year AI infrastructure tailwind.

Valuation

At $73.89 vs $102.55 DCF base, the shares screen far below our guide-anchored base case. NTM P/E 11.9x and PEG 0.36 are outright cheap for 60% growth, and the guide-anchored DCF now agrees with the multiples. Market misprices the inflection.

Cascadia scorecard

Composite score 77: Attractive. Confidence High, as of 22-Oct-2026.

Investment view

CASCADIA ANALYTICS

A Q3 miss or N+M yield issues would cut Growth and Trend. Continued 30%+ growth with margin expansion supports a higher multiple.

Investment view: Buy. The shares fell about 28 percent on the print to $73.89, between our $70.39 Bear case and our $102.55 Base case, even though Q3 FY2026 beat across the headline lines: sales of $1,203.9M rose 60 percent year over year, non-GAAP EPS was $1.46, adjusted EBITDA was $242.3M at a 20.1 percent margin, operating cash flow was $154.7M, and total book to bill was 2.13, with data center and networking revenue up 115 percent and aerospace and defense backlog at $2.0B. We anchor fiscal 2026 to the raised full-year guide, sales of $4.47B to $4.49B with the midpoint at $4,480M, and we rebuilt the bridge from the September 28, 2026 balance sheet: cash of $876.3M against total debt of $1,643.9M, for net debt of $767.6M, on 107.7M diluted shares. Epiq closed on September 30 and took net leverage to 2.8x pro forma; management expects leverage back inside its 1.5x to 2.0x target range by the Ophir close, and we raised the model's cost of debt by 100 basis points to price the heavier floating-rate stack, which puts live WACC at 8.57 percent. The bridge still runs off the September 28, 2026 balance sheet, before the September 30 funding of the $1,100M of Epiq facilities; the Q3 10-Q had not been filed as of this update, and we will cross-check the post-close debt stack against the bridge when it files. Fiscal 2027 is now built from management's preliminary guide, sales of $6.5B to $6.75B: the Bear case carries the $6,500M low end, the Base case the $6,625M midpoint and the Bull case the $6,750M high end. The step from 2026, about 48 percent at the midpoint, is acquisition annualization rather than organic growth, because the guide holds Epiq and Swiss Technology Group for a full year and excludes Ophir, Merlin and ILFA. From 2028 each scenario resumes its prior growth rate off its own 2027 base: 8 percent in Bear, 14 percent in Base and 20 percent in Bull. Our scenario values are Bear $70.39, Base $102.55 and Bull $112.02, for a blended target of $96.88. The Base case offers about 39 percent upside from $73.89. Two audit corrections are in this update. First, working capital: the model previously charged just 1.5 percent of each year's revenue step, a template default with no support in the filings. TTM's filed record, computed from its 10-K balance sheets, is 21.2 percent of the revenue step in fiscal 2025, 12.0 percent in fiscal 2024, and a 14.3 percent release rate in fiscal 2023, when revenue fell; the median of those three years, 14.3 percent, is now the model's rate in every scenario. Second, terminal capex: in the prior build, 2030 capex exactly equaled 2030 D&A in every scenario (both $696.9M in Base), which understates reinvestment at a 2.5 percent terminal growth rate; terminal-year capex is now set at 1.24x D&A, the median of TTM's filed fiscal 2023 to 2025 capex to total D&A ratios. One discipline note stands, and we quantify it. Our EBIT margins are unchanged from the prior build: for 2027 the model carries EBIT of $507M in Bear, $563M in Base and $574M in Bull. Carried through interest on the pre-close debt stack at the model's pre-tax cost of debt, about $122M, and the model's 15 percent cash tax rate, those EBIT figures translate to an earnings proxy of about $3.03 to $3.56 per diluted share, against management's preliminary 2027 non-GAAP EPS guide of $8.10 to $8.90. Part of that gap is definitional: the guide is a non-GAAP figure, and the add-backs behind it (amortization of definite-lived intangibles, stock-based compensation, restructuring and acquisition charges, and derivative and hedge marks) ran to $133.8M pre-tax in the first nine months of 2026, about $54M in the third quarter alone. The larger part is structural: our 2027 EBIT margins of 7.8 to 8.5 percent sit below the 13.5 percent GAAP operating margin TTM reported in Q3 2026 itself, and well below its 17.4 percent non-GAAP operating margin that quarter, because our margin path was built from the prior model's free cash flow trajectory and starts 2026 at 6.5 percent. We do not tune margins to guidance, so the guided earnings power, if delivered, is upside to these values rather than an input to them.
